BECOME A COUNSELLOR

with a Master of Counselling

Course Cricos Code: 112554A

Australian Qualifications Framework: Level 9

🕒 Duration: 2 years

📅 Intakes: February, May and September

📖 Units: 10 core units + 4 elective units.
(A trimester has a full time study load of 3 units.)

Counselling has developed substantially over the past decade. It is increasingly being recognised for its efficacy in practice, and its more practical education and therapeutic approach. This has positioned counselling as a more attractive career option to its more science and statistically based mental health peers.

Combined with our industry leading support services and teaching methods, you are fully supported in your study of advanced counselling topics to develop your skills as a counselling professional.

The Master of Counselling teaches contemporary counselling content and skills to an advanced level and is ideally suited to students wanting to develop their counselling knowledge and skills to a higher level, or aspiring to pursue a career in this high demand industry.

The Master of Counselling has been designed and developed by Australian Institute of Professional Counsellors (AIPC), a specialist counselling education provider. This course is an AIPC course. Acknowledge Education (AE) is a well-known and experienced provider and delivers the course on behalf of AIPC.

Learning Methods

For units requiring on-campus learning, you attend 3 hours of lectures and tutorials each week for each unit.

To support your on-campus learning, you are provided specifically written and easy to understand study materials including study guide and readings, all purposefully designed to make your studies as conducive to learning as possible.

Some units require application of practical skills through role play. Role plays are conducted in tutorial sessions in a supportive and encouraging learning environment.

Placement

The Master of Counselling includes a Work Placement and Capstone Project where you undertake clinical practice in a work setting and complete a real-world counselling project. A counselling placement is essential in assisting the transition from application in a simulated setting to real practice.

During your work placement, you will also complete a practical capstone project in a counselling environment. The practicum involves the completion of 12 hours work each week for 12 weeks along with 24 hours to attend individual counselling supervision with the workplace supervisor and group supervision by teleconference with the Lecturer.

Master of Counselling students can undertake their placement at Australian Counselling Services, AIPC's own counselling clinic, or through AE's network of community organisations and counselling practices.

Entry Requirements

You can apply for entry to the Master of Counselling course if you have successfully completed an undergraduate (Bachelor) degree in any field.
